

Director-General of the Department of Empowerment of Persons with Disabilities
Announcement from the Department of Empowerment of Persons with Disabilities
Subject of honest intentions in opposing corruption and to operate under Good Governance

The Department of Empowerment of Persons with Disabilities realizes the effects of corruptions in Thailand which have led to severe damage in economics and social development, especially the corruptions that happen in the government agencies. The department has determined to establish a good reputation in transparency, honesty, and good moral, including creating good conscience, participation of individuals in preventing and working against corruption, and operating under Good Governance. The executives and officers in the Department of Empowerment of Persons with Disabilities would like to express honest intentions in opposing corruption and to operate under Good Governance, as follows,

1. Transparency by divulging information and news without concealing or misrepresent, especially about purchasing and employment
2. Responsibility by listening to feedbacks or complaints from consumers, stakeholders, and the public. Always ready to be inspected and take responsibility in their actions.
3. Working without corruption by not taking bribes or accepting assets, properties from others using position or influence for their own benefits or others.
4. Good moral in the organization by indoctrinating good moral value, ethics, honesty, justice, public conscience, and attitude towards corruption. Not accepting and tolerating any kind of corruption.
5. Morality in working within the agency by working according to policies, rules, handbook, and working standard strictly under Good Governance, and managing budgets accordingly with the most beneficial results.

For your acknowledgement
